Two officers and five enlisted men military compose the command section, with the senior officer designated as the shore party group commander and the junior officer as his executive. Range practice. LandingBoatsAreImportant! This adaptability and versatility allows additional options for the JFC that do not limit the activities of the other components. Amphibious operations require the unique ability to operate across air, land, and sea.

See figure 8. The military component, however, is stable only in its basic elements. Forward-deployed AFs provide the JFC with a force proficient in time-sensitive planning and capable of rapid response in crisis situations. An amphibious operation could be planned or executed within any of the six phases of a major operation or campaign as discussed in JP Joint Operations, and JP Joint Operation Planning.
