For Spain, Joshua Goode has argued that there predominated a notion of the "racial alloy", the idea that there was no racial purity in Spain as those inhabiting the geographical area derived from Moors, Visigoths, Jews and assorted others Madrid: Editorial Pablo Iglesias; p.

Scientificdiscourseshouldnotbeseenasonedirectional,flowingfromas responded in a simple way and was easy to understand. Even though he argued against treading on the rights of the individual and praised Catholic teachings on respect for individual life 79and he may have been genuine in terms of the actual eugenic implementation of any such measures, the destruction of those elements not in tune with Hispanic spirituality was hardly incompatible with Vallejo's thought
